BARREL BOFFINS

Since our foray into space aboard the International Space Station, we've become fairly used to hob-nobbing with various boffin-types. So it pleased us greatly to be able to welcome a delegation of physicists and other notable scientific types to the Distillery in July. They gathered here for a Physics conference to discuss a myriad of subjects we really don't understand.

However, one who stood a chance is our very own Seasonal Tour Guide Ross Johnston, who has just achieved a first class degree in Physics. Ross leads our Deconstructing the Dram Tour so if you fancy lubricating your little grey cells as well as your taste buds next time you're here, this is the tour for you. Luckily for most of us, he has a knack for explaining complex stuff in layman's terms. He was recently found explaining the difference between polysaccharides and monosaccharides with the aid of some Ardbeg bunting.
